Ⅱ 次の文章を読み、後の問いに答えなさい。

Elijah and Daisuke are watching TV together.

Elijah : That movie was great, wasn't it? It reminds me of my favorite episode of Doctor Who.

Daisuke : Doctor Who? What's that?

Elijah : It's a popular TV show in the UK. It started in 1963 and is still made today, so people of all ages know about it!

Daisuke : 1963? Wow, that's much ①(old) than the Sazae-san anime. Is it about a hospital?

Elijah : Actually, it's science fiction. It's ②(____) an alien called the Doctor who travels through space and time in a blue police box.

Daisuke : Wait, the main character isn't a real doctor?! Also, how does he travel through time and space in a police box...?

Elijah : It looks like a police box ③(____) the outside, but it's actually a time machine. It's a disguise!

Daisuke : I see...

Elijah : In each episode, the Doctor goes to a different planet or a different time period, for example ancient Rome or the distant future. ④It's (don't / you / because / what / know / exciting) will happen next!

Daisuke : So even though it's science fiction, you can learn about history by watching it?

Elijah : Yeah. Both children and adults can enjoy it, but sometimes, it can be scary. When I was little, I would have nightmares after watching it.

Daisuke : But you still enjoyed it?

Elijah : The Doctor always wins in the end, so it's not that bad. Oh, and each season also has a different cast. The Doctor can sometimes change into a different person. When that happens, the actor changes. Usually, the Doctor is male, but the last one was a woman.

Daisuke : That's interesting! ⑤(____) season do you recommend?

Elijah : I like the season that started in 2005. The other seasons are also good, but we can't watch many episodes now.

Daisuke : ⑥How come?

Elijah : In the past, after the episode was shown on TV, the data would be erased. Because of this, nearly half of the episodes made before 1970 can't be watched.

Daisuke : That's too bad. Do you know how I can watch the 2005 season?

Elijah : You can watch it on an online streaming service, but I have the DVDs, so we can watch it together if you like.

Daisuke : That ⑦(____) good! When should we meet?

Elijah : Next week on Monday should be fine!

Daisuke : Okay. Hmm, I can't wait for the day!

Elijah : Ha-ha! Anyway, see you then!

Fireworks in Winter

Across the world, fireworks are a symbol of celebration, but different cultures do not always use them in the same way. In Japan, people can watch fireworks on summer nights, but in many other countries, late autumn and winter is the time for fireworks. I will introduce some interesting festivals of fireworks. You can find the ①different from Japanese fireworks. You will be ②interesting in such celebrations.

In Europe and North America, people celebrate New Year's Day with large fireworks at midnight on January 1st. A lot of people go out to see them on ③that day. The places for seeing ④them are very crowded. People count down the seconds to New Year's Day and watch large fireworks. In India, on the other hand, the Hindu festival of light, Diwali, happens across five days in autumn. Smaller shows at Christmas and Halloween parties have become ⑤() worldwide.

However, there is another festival for which fireworks are especially important. Every year on ⑥() 5th, Bonfire Night or Guy Fawkes Night is celebrated in the UK. On this day, many people gather in parks and gardens to watch fireworks and build large bonfires.

The festival is named after Guy Fawkes. In the 17th century he planned to burn down the British government building and kill the king. However, he was caught before he could prepare the bomb. Since 1605 Bonfire Night has been held to celebrate the failure of the 'Gunpowder Plot'.

In the past, dolls of Guy Fawkes were often burnt on the bonfire, but ⑦this is less common today. In modern times the festival is far from ⑧the original story, and its main purpose is to enjoy fireworks themselves.

The largest Bonfire Night celebrations happen in the town of Lewes in southern England. There is a parade through the main street and people race while carrying a barrel. ⑨Dolls (to / politicians / the festival / tried / stop / who / of) are burnt. Everyone in the parade dresses up and carries a torch, which makes the whole town red from the fire.

Watching the parade is a very interesting experience, so if you are in England during late autumn, I recommend it! It's hard to forget when Bonfire Night happens, because of the phrase "Remember, remember, that day,..." This phrase is famous among English people. I hope you will go to the UK at the end of autumn and see a lot of different things from Japanese celebrations.
